Trap Line in Heart Of Baltimore Pays Off for 19-Year-Old

BALTIMORE, Md.—One of the most prosperous trappers in the United States is 19-year-old Paul Dider—where he never leaves the City of Baltimore.

In fact, his 300 traps are staked out in the back yards of north and south Baltimore. His trap line is a part of the Maryland game and inland fish commission's program to remove wild life from areas where it is a nuisance and put it in places where it will provide sport for Maryland hunters.

Paul catches from 600 to 700 squirrels, skunks, possums and chipmunks every month.

The youth had quite a bait problem when he first began trapping. He started out with hard-shelled corn, but soon the pigeons began robbing his traps.

He shifted to green walnuts. But the squirrels quickly grew tired of them. Next came an experiment with nutmeg. The neighborhood children found out about that. End of experiment.

Now he uses raw peanuts. It's the ideal bait. The squirrels love them. And the children don't. By the time the bait problem was straightened out, another head set in. Folks along the trap line got to feeling sorry for the squirrels and began to release them.

Since the traps are set only in areas where they are requested because of small animal damage, it is a nuisance to understand.

One woman who requested trapping service, then freed the squirrels, gave this explanation: "I just wanted to teach them a lesson."

Most of the animals caught are sent to the city's animal pound. Some are released. A number of pigeons, cats, dogs and chipmunks.

So far, only one cat has been unharmed to slip into a trap. It was a Siamese cat named "Whiskers."

Whiskers' meet the highest quality tests and standards.

CHAPTER XI

Frazer gave him a nod of appreciation and remarked, "Looks like you're going somewhere. Is that Bartlett's rig?"

The old man frowned. "Seems like there's some argument as to who's going where. The old boy's trying to send the gal away to some place they got out in the hills. She says she ain't going, but he's kinda stubborn. Asked me to come down and harness up for him."

"Going where?" Frazer asked quickly.

"I dunno. I reckon I'll drive 'em, but they ain't a-sorry 'nong too good on who's going or when."

Frazer studied the old fellow for a moment, then asked cautiously, "Did you hire out to Bartlett?"

"You might say as how I did. He asked me to take on this chore, and I couldn't very well turn him down, seein' as how they were mighty white to me last time I was in the hills."

"There was honest antismoking on the weathered features, and Frazer knew that he had made no mistake in breaching the subject. "Sonora," the old man repeated wonderingly. "What in tarnation fire are we talking about?"

"Too much of it to explain," Frazer said shortly. "Bartlett's backing a scheme that's due to turn the tender country into a shambles. The men you were with in the ration last night were trying to pump you for information about a shipment of guns that was supposed to be hidden near there."

"Where? Sounds right exciting. Well, they didn't get nothing out of me. I'd swear there wasn't anything caught up there in them caverns. I been all through 'em and I didn't see no sign of anybody having been in there."

"Maybe that's what they wanted to know," Frazer told him dryly. "Now they won't have to search that part of the country. Anyway, it looks to me like Bartlett's trying to get his daughter out of the country before the storm breaks. See that you take good care of her—and keep your eyes skinned for a little southern rum. He might take a notion to brave some lead at her. If he turns up you better shoot first and ask questions afterward."

Ignoring the old prospector's amusing question, he turned toward a back door and climbed a stairway which he had not seen in his previous visit. He was a man of ceremony, so he contented himself with a shout of greeting as he went. He was a man of ceremony, so he contented himself with a shout of greeting as he went. He was a man of ceremony, so he contented himself with a shout of greeting as he went.

Derek Bartlett met him in what appeared to be a sort of pantry, the man's dark face black and angry. Obviously he had been quarreling with his daughter, but there was more than mere anger in those fanatical eyes. The man was showing some of the fear which must have been growing upon him during the past twelve hours. For the first time he seemed to be recognizing the dread implications of the storm he had stirred up.

"Morning," Frazer greeted abruptly. "Sorry to intrude at such an hour, but I would like to speak to you daughter."

Bartlett faltered, then spoke with an obvious effort at politeness. "Come right along in. We never finished that talk we were having last evening."

"You left rather suddenly," Frazer reminded him.

"Sorry about that. Something important came up and I had to attend to it." He broke off shortly, still showing signs of uneasiness. It seemed clear that he did not intend to renew his earlier offer of employment, and Frazer wondered what had brought about the change. He was a man of ceremony, so he contented himself with a shout of greeting as he went.

"Because somebody is mighty anxious about a gun. I don't think it's of the guns I had. I think it must be the gun I gave to you last night. That's what I want to talk about. Do you suppose I might stay here long enough to get it? I stay out where the wind can blow on me?"

Bartlett relaxed enough to smile at the final phrase. "I'll see what I can do. You'd better wait here."

He could hear the sound of muffled voices from a distant part of the house. Helen's tones were almost inaudible, but Derek Bartlett was booming heartily, apparently in a sudden good humor. Something had occurred to please him that was certain.

He was smiling broadly when he came back into the room, and Frazer realized that he was a pleasantly attractive man when the fanaticism and fear were both absent from his eyes. "She's going," he said abruptly. "I don't know whether to thank you or that damn cent, but something altered her stubborn attitude."

He studied the young man as though suddenly interested in this tall young fellow who had affected his daughter so strangely. "I'm not quite sure I understand her motives in the matter, but I won't argue. The important thing is that she's getting out of town."

"It must be the perfume," Frazer murmured, trying to keep his face from getting red. "I hope I didn't overdo it. I wanted Delaplane to be convinced. The man who was the Duke, I'm pretty certain. No one else, but I'll know him. I sure the next time I see him."

"Why didn't you say so?" Frazer chuckled. "I hope I didn't overdo it. I wanted Delaplane to be convinced. The man who was the Duke, I'm pretty certain. No one else, but I'll know him. I sure the next time I see him."

Frazer chuckled. "I hope I didn't overdo it. I wanted Delaplane to be convinced. The man who was the Duke, I'm pretty certain. No one else, but I'll know him. I sure the next time I see him."

time. But not until she's out of Mesa Verde. If it's the perfume business that was responsible for her agreeing to go I'm not going to risk another change of mind. She's a real woman, that respect and stubborn, too."

Frazer grinned at the other's tone. "Is that the gun you're carrying?"

Bartlett started. "I completely forgot I had that. It was handed to me, his glance becoming a little more keen. "What do you expect to learn from it?"

"I don't rightly know," Frazer told him. "It's just that somebody was mighty anxious to get hold of a gun from me last night. The one I had didn't seem unusual in any way, so I figured it must be this one they wanted."

Frazer studied the weapon briefly and knew the same sort of bafflement as he had to learn on the inspection of the other two guns. Apparently Mesa Verde did not have much of a gun business, but the patient stood an excellent chance of recovery when he reached a hospital. According to the medical military record, 96 out of 100 men who reached hospitals were saved. In World War I, 100 men who reached hospitals were saved. In World War I, 100 men who reached hospitals were saved.

"Maybe I guessed wrong," he said with a frown. "I did I've pulled a gun from under a log, and two other Colts where the first snapper could pick them up."

He started for the stairway, pausing only long enough to throw a parting remark at the stout man. "Don't forget to put in a good word for me."

"Later," Bartlett said briefly. Then he added significantly, "You'd better try to see me some time today. I'd be interested to know how you make out with your gun purchase. The last sentence was obviously an afterthought."

All Shells Removed From Mystery Guns

It was something of a surprise to find the six guns still on the washstand. If Dan had not placed them so carefully he might have believed that no one had been near them during the interval since he had gone to breakfast. However, he had marked their positions carefully and he said that both had been moved. Someone had been present in making a raid—but why had the guns been left?

The obvious answer was that neither of these weapons was the one in which someone had such a strong interest. That put the pressure squarely back upon the Colt which he had brought from Bartlett's. It must be Archie Scott's gun that the searchers wanted.

A close inspection of the gun told him nothing. Evidently it was a weapon which Scott had procured locally and, although it was not new, it had been recently cleaned and oiled. So recently that Frazer knew the job must have been interesting. It threw an interesting sidelight on the girl's character. Not many girls would have thought to clean a faded gun, particularly under such circumstances as had obtained during the previous raid.

The fact was not helpful otherwise. He could not see a thing about the weapon which offered any hint as to why anyone should be anxious to get hold of it. He broke out the cylinder and inspected the loads. The chamber was empty, the customary safety measure, and the other five contained fresh, bright cartridges. Again it told him only that the girl was accustomed to using her head. She had been smart enough to check the weapon and reload it.

He seemed to be up against a blank wall, but he knew that there must be an answer here. Having eliminated all possibilities but one, he suddenly found himself toying with an idea that seemed like a real bunch. He turned back to the other two Colts and opened them. There was not a single shell in either one.

That seemed to clinch the matter. He left all three weapons on the washstand and went out quickly, speaking to no one as he left the hotel, and strode grimly up the street toward Carson Emery's little box of an office.

Delaplane was there, talking to the marshal, and Frazer favored him with a dry grin. "Morning, gent," he greeted. "I want to lodge a complaint about somebody in my room at the hotel last night."

Emery chuckled and Delaplane laughed about it. Frazer looked pained and went on to explain his troubles, deliberately impersonating the roughest sort of tenor. Emery heard him through in silence and rose to the occasion, sending Delaplane out to search for the man described by Frazer. The deputy went, openly derisive.

As soon as the younger man was out of earshot the little marshal dropped his patient air. Squinting thoughtfully at his visitor he demanded, "What the hell's it all about? You don't have to act that dumb."

Frazer chuckled. "I hope I didn't overdo it. I wanted Delaplane to be convinced. The man who was the Duke, I'm pretty certain. No one else, but I'll know him. I sure the next time I see him."

BIGTOWN U.S.A. MARKET

The Heart of America
53% of your prospects

Bigtown U.S.A. has potential sales far greater than currently sold—far greater than you have sold it.

For example, it is 49% of filling station sales, yet what oil company is advertising and sales effort match this? It is 36% of all food sales, yet what food company's advertising and sales effort match this? It is 28% of all drug products, yet what drug manufacturer can match this? It is 31% of all retail sales, yet what individual company can match this?

While we doubt that very many manufacturers' sales managers can match even these lower percentages, we know only a very, very few can prove 53%.

The opportunity is there. A larger percentage is possible for you. We can prove it by new specific product brand-name research—the results of which are now available on request from the first state-wide survey, while similar research is now being conducted in a second state.

College Students Selling Jitters, Educators Report

CHICAGO—American college students have war jitters, university officials throughout the nation report.

As a result many men students have adopted "what's the use" attitude and dropped out of school.

The survey of more than 35 colleges and universities showed that many students had been called into reserve units and that large numbers of students planned to enlist after mid-term examinations rather than wait to be drafted in June so they might have their pick of the services. Some students just did not show up after Christmas.

A University of Texas official said about 400 students had dropped out of school to enlist in recent months.

Students at Princeton said dormitory jitters had been asked to make a check to see just who had come back from the Christmas holidays. University officials said they predicted their enrollment would drop to 200 next fall, a decline of one-third.

Victims of Worry

A Duquesne University official said a check showed that five percent of the students had adopted a "don't-give-a-damn attitude" and were cutting classes and ignoring their studies. He said another 20 percent were the victims of worry and general tension.

Other universities reported many students were ignoring their classes and that grades had dropped in many cases.

J. D. Williams, chancellor of the University of Mississippi, reported: "The uncertainty of the mobilization program has contributed to restlessness, impatience, confusion, frustration and in some instances despair on the part of many students. Some seem relieved when they actually were called to active duty."

At Yale, Harvard, Dartmouth, Brown and Princeton, a "general unhappiness" was reported. A Dartmouth spokesman said the school already had lost a "substantial percentage" of students through enlistments.

At the University of Florida, H. H. Miller, the president, scheduled a meeting of all 1,800 male students in an effort to combat the despondent attitude caused by the war. He said grades in all except reserve officer training courses had plummeted and the student body was "paper estimated about 50 men a week were quitting school to enlist."

Scholastic Averages Drop

"We need a clearer outlook for students," said Willis Tate, vice president of Southern Methodist University. "Many of the weaker students—those in the lower half of their class—definitely are studying less. After all, they've lost their incentive because of the present draft laws."

He said there was "much hysteria and misinformation" on the campus and indication on the part of men "faced by the threat of changes in the draft law."

Other schools reported the scholastic average had dropped slightly, partially because of the "terrible turmoil at present" and a bitterness among students.

Frustrated Seltzer Is Made Happy by Bad Golf Players

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Zev's Peerless Beau, son of a field trial champion, was a frustrated English setter. His owner was too busy to take him to the field more than once or twice a year.

Then one day Harry Wheeler, Zev's owner, took him out on the golf course for a run. Someone hit a golf ball and Zev wanted to retrieve it. Wheeler ordered the disappointed Zev to heel.

Then when a ball dropped into the rough and an unhappy golfer beat the bushes in a vain attempt to find it, Wheeler gave Zev the "go ahead."

Zev almost held a point on the missing ball and then raced into the brush after it. A few moments later he retrieved. Before the afternoon was over, Zev had found six lost balls.

Zev had a new occupation now—retriever of lost golf balls. His owner says he's no longer a frustrated dog.

Navy Gives in to Pupils; Will Not Call Up Teacher

CHICAGO, Ill.—The navy surrendered recently to a 12-year-old girl.

She is Janet Smith, who wrote Rear Adm. J. C. Gray Jones, commandant of the 9th naval district. Janet, supported by 163 schoolmates, asked deferment of their favorite teacher, Perry J. Rockwell, 26, World War II aviator and a naval reservist, who had been called up as of February 1.

The children said they needed Rockwell more than the navy did and asked that his service call be put off until June 25, the end of school.

NOT GREEDY

The quiet little freshman coed from the country was on her first college date, and thrilled beyond words. She didn't want to appear country. She had put on her prettiest dress, gotten a sophisticated hair-do, and was all prepared to talk understandingly about music, art or politics.

Her hero took her to a movie and then to the favorite college cafe.

"Two sodas," he told the waiter. "She, not to be outside, murmured: 'The same for me.'"

Undoubtedly you have heard the story of the exasperated waiter, badgered by an ill-mannered diner who demanded a special seat for a murder mystery film, who whispered in her ear just as the picture began, "The butler did it."

WASTED BULLET

Pat and Mike were duck hunting. Pat saw a wild duck far overhead, and gave it both barrels. To his delight, he saw the bird fall to the ground. "I've wasted that powder, Pat," said Mike.

Pat turned to Mike and said: "Didn't it kill the bird?"

"Sure you did, Pat, but the fall would have killed him anyway."

Bulldog Practice

A young interne, who walked past the psychiatric ward each morning and watched one of the inmates go through the motions of winding up and pitching an imaginary ball was finally asked by one of his friends why he stopped daily and watched the scrawny go through the act.

"Well," he answered, "if things keep going the way they are, I'll be in there some day catching for that guy, and I want to get onto this curves."

'Old' Pilots of 30 Fly Fighter Planes In Korean Conflict

KOREA—The World War II theory that fighter planes are for the college crowd is being exploded by the old men of the United States Air Force. In fact, the average age of the fighter boys in Korea is five years above that of those in the last war.

In World War II the age limit for fighter pilots was under thirty. This time many a wingman in his late thirties and in 30 at the back of his head is in their forties.

According to many group commanders, the older men are preferable. They are less likely to be killed in a crash landing. At first, many a young hot-shot sheered a wing off his plane trying to make it perform the impossible. Their elders take fewer unnecessary chances and don't insist on victory rolls when coming in over their home field.

Older men get tired faster, but the fighter pilots say that reflexes are better than those of the average man of their age, but fewer than those of pilots in their twenties.

The jets are simple to fly. They require less physical exertion than prop planes. But dives and pullouts entail a greater strain, resulting in momentary blackouts.

Physical requirements for pilots have not changed in the five years since World War II ended. Still required of each pilot are split-second, perfect depth of perception to prevent collisions in close support flights with one another. Feet separate the planes' wing tips.

Some youngsters have accused the older fliers of not being a low enough and not staying over targets long enough. To which one gray-haired major of 34 with 200 hours to his credit in jets replied, "It's all in a man's mind. The weakest of fliers is a man who isn't. I'll still be flying fighters at 50 if my luck holds out and the air force lets me."

Missouri's Favorite Son

Can't Play Missouri Waltz

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Washington's best known pianist can't play "The Missouri Waltz." The secret was exposed at a Blair House tea for veterans from Washington area hospitals.

President Truman sat down at the piano and asked the guests what they would like. Someone shouted, "The Missouri Waltz."

After the fiasco, the pianist in Washington said he never had learned to play it. He substituted "Black Hawk Waltz."

Air Force Plans Delivery Of Troops In Package Form

DAYTON, O.—The air force has come up with a plan for dropping soldiers and equipment in one package—a sort of one-package drop.

Tests will begin soon on a container capable of holding 6,000 pounds. Engineers at Wright-Patterson air force base say the container may be used to drop an entire infantry squad and equipment from an airplane. Or, the container may be used as a complete weather station, rescue station, or survival and rescue hut for arctic use.

Humans have not been dropped in the container, which consists of a framework of tubes mounted atop metal landing skid provided with plywood flooring.

Four movable aluminum triangular compartments are attached to the frame. They can be arranged as a square box to carry cargo or rearranged to carry troops.

A single 100-foot parachute would be used for loads up to 3,500 pounds, and two 100-foot parachutes for loads up to 6,000 pounds.

Count Shows U. S. Rolling In Chips — Potato, That Is

CINCINNATI, O.—The United States is really rolling in chips—potato, that is.

A spokesman for the industry estimated that 92,000,750,000 potato chips were eaten last year—a record. How do they know it was that many?

A public relations man for the institute reported that 284,500,000 pounds of the chips were consumed. Asked how many chips that meant, he said he did not know, but would find out.

Several hours later, he reported: "I got a pound and counted 'em," he said. "There are an average of 215 chips to the pound. My multiplication shows that to be about 92,000,750,000."

Shoppers in Memphis Are Honest: $132 Is Returned

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—William Minshew, 18, a Kaskaskia (Miss.) student at the Memphis business school, will tell you that Memphis shoppers are honest. He dropped $132 in bills from his pocket yesterday. A staff member scooped them up and sent them flying. All but one dollar was returned after a newspaper story described the "rain" of $1,310 and $20 bills over the city.

Minshew's explanation.

Bus Strategy

This man elbows his way onto a bus and sees a tired-looking lady, seated down with bundles, standing by the door. He looks at her and, with a strapping 125-car-old boy.

A gentleman, the man offers the lady a quarter for his seat. The boy accepts, gets up and the man motions for the lady to take the seat. At first she protests, but sits down when he insisted firmly.

"You should thank the nice man for the quarter," she chides.

"Oh," cried the staid lad, "I already did, mama!"

DON'T MIND EMANUEL

In a little town in Mexico, Pedro was sipping his beer at a tavern when an excited friend rushed in. "Pedro!" he shouted. "I just saw a man go into your house and start making love to your wife!"

"Is that so?" replied Pedro calmly, and continued sipping his beer.

"Was he a tall man?"

"Yes, yes!" shouted his friend. "Don't get so excited!" cautioned Pedro. "Did he have a brown suit?"

"Yes, he did!"

"And did he have a big mustache?"

"Yes, yes!"

"Oh, that's Emanuel. He makes love to anybody!"

Not So Forgetful

Fanny Brice has always been somewhat absent-minded, except about certain matters. Jesse Block, an old-time vaudeville acquaintance, recently visited her in Hollywood and mentioned having been on the same bill with her at the Oriental Theater in Chicago.

"I never played the Oriental," said Miss Brice.

"You did," said Block, "and after the show we went to the College Inn."

"I never went to the College Inn with you."

"Don't you remember?" said Block. "I pointed out Al Capone to you."

"Who's Al Capone?" asked Fanny.

"Fanny," said Block, "that was the week at the Oriental you got $700."

"I did not," said Miss Brice. "I got $8000."

Ranch owner George Stephens proved for himself, in the big Economy Run, just how little it costs to run his Ford Truck!

"The Lazy J's Ford Express did itself proud in the Ford Truck Economy Run," says Stephens. "Daily records kept during the entire six months show that our Ford Truck ran up a total of 5,109 miles. My out-of-pocket expense for gas, oil, maintenance and repairs was exactly $123.51... about a $20 bill each month... only 2 1/2 cents a mile!"

The Ford Truck POWER PILOT carburetion-ignition system is one reason why Ford Trucks cost so little to run, in ranch work or any work. The POWER PILOT gives you the most power from the least gas. In the low-price field, only Ford has it!

REVENGE

UNFAIR ON STRIKE

Undoubtedly you have heard the story of the exasperated waiter, badgered by an ill-mannered diner who demanded a special seat for a murder mystery film, who whispered in her ear just as the picture began, "The butler did it."

WASTED BULLET

Pat and Mike were duck hunting. Pat saw a wild duck far overhead, and gave it both barrels. To his delight, he saw the bird fall to the ground. "I've wasted that powder, Pat," said Mike.

Pat turned to Mike and said: "Didn't it kill the bird?"

"Sure you did, Pat, but the fall would have killed him anyway."

Bulldog Practice

A young interne, who walked past the psychiatric ward each morning and watched one of the inmates go through the motions of winding up and pitching an imaginary ball was finally asked by one of his friends why he stopped daily and watched the scrawny go through the act.

"Well," he answered, "if things keep going the way they are, I'll be in there some day catching for that guy, and I want to get onto this curves."

Shoppers in Memphis Are Honest: $132 Is Returned

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—William Minshew, 18, a Kaskaskia (Miss.) student at the Memphis business school, will tell you that Memphis shoppers are honest. He dropped $132 in bills from his pocket yesterday. A staff member scooped them up and sent them flying. All but one dollar was returned after a newspaper story described the "rain" of $1,310 and $20 bills over the city.

Minshew's explanation.

CINCINNATI, O.—The United States is really rolling in chips—potato, that is.

A spokesman for the industry estimated that 92,000,750,000 potato chips were eaten last year—a record. How do they know it was that many?

A public relations man for the institute reported that 284,500,000 pounds of the chips were consumed. Asked how many chips that meant, he said he did not know, but would find out.

Several hours later, he reported: "I got a pound and counted 'em," he said. "There are an average of 215 chips to the pound. My multiplication shows that to be about 92,000,750,000."

"SMALL BUSINESS"

Senate delay on House $7 billion tax bill, causes concern among business and officials. Every day of delay is just another day the public will hear more about the squandering of American wealth.

House vote on record-setting tax boost was close, could have been voted down had a non-partisan attitude prevailed.

However, in the Senate, the trend is less favorable to the tax increase. C. W. Harder on straight party lines.

Thereby hangs the cause of anguish in certain quarters. Not only are many Senators voting on a non-partisan basis, but Senators are investigating, MacArthur incident shows that.

Senators are also becoming more and more concerned with the soundness of the American economy. At least one Senator has launched a search for a small business, but now Senators are digging deep into facts.

Sen. John Sparkman (Ala.) as chairman of the Senate Small Business Committee, has launched a search for a small business, but now Senators are digging deep into facts.

JEST JESTIN

Good Aim
Driving a new car, a man hit a pedestrian who was crossing the street. Unhurt, the pedestrian demanded, "What's the matter? Are you blind?" Glowering, the motorist replied, "I don't look like I do, but I hit you, didn't I?"

LOCAL OPTION
A vicious young Cleveland shocked her Boston-reared beau by drawing on her gloves as they started down the street on their first date. "Where I come from," she said, "people would as soon see a woman as put on her stockings in public as they do gloves."

Careful Seat
Jack MacGregor was a shy young Scot, anxious to get married but hardly knowing how to go about it. At length he thought he saw his opportunity in a dispatch printed in the local newspaper. It told of a comely young woman who had agreed to marry any man who would pay her father's debts.

But wait a minute. Suppose you are dining out, and you happen to know where the meat came from, and somebody at the table knows, and somebody at the table isn't very clear-headed, and when he sees you eating the meat, thinks you must be approving of heathen sacrifices; then what?

Or perhaps, some one else is less enlightened than you, eating such meat seems quite wrong to him, but when he sees you eating it, he may (just to be polite) follow suit, and yet his conscience, not being an educated conscience like yours, will hurt him all the same. So what you do quite freely and rightly, causes another man to go against his conscience.

Think of Your Brother!
Now, then, Paul says: "If what I can make my brother fall, I will never eat meat again, rather than make my brother fall." (American translation.) There you have the Christian principle.

The important question is not, "Is it any harm?" but "What effect is this going to have on other people?"

We have seen that the basic Christian principle in all human relationships is the importance of personality. If an act, even a harmless and blameless act, hurts persons—makes them sin, makes them go against their own conscience, then the Christian's rule is at once: Don't.

The rightness or wrongness of a thing is not all in the thing itself. It comes from its effects on persons. Now apply this to some of our own problems of social living. Is drinking alcoholic liquor a sin? Is the use of tobacco a sin? Is dancing a sin? — name a few.

Let us suppose, for the sake of the argument, that you are not harmed by such things yourself. It is a fact, however, that some people are harmed by them. Now suppose your act, which is quite harmless to you and done with a clear conscience, influences another and perhaps weakens person to indulge in something harmful to him? Then a Christian will say, as Paul said: "If this thing makes my brother fall, I will never do it again. Which, after all, is more important to me, my own freedom or my brother's character?"

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY DR. KENNETH L. FOREMAN
Scripture: Luke 1:22; Romans 12:1-2; 1 John 2:15-17
Devotional Reading: Psalm 1

Think of Brother
Lesson for July 29, 1951

The Christians in the city of Corinth were bothered about a number of things. One of them never bothers anybody any more, and yet, strange as it seems, it throws a light on some of the hottest problems a Christian meets.

The Corinthian problem was best-kept secret. We have a problem with that, too—that is, how we are going to pay for it. That wasn't the Corinthian problem.

This was away back in Roman times. Every city had its temple where sacrifices were made to the gods. Sacrifices were of all kinds, from flowers to cattle, and the animal would be bled away, and the blood would be poured out on the altar, and the rest would be eaten up on roasts, steaks and what not, and sold on the counter just like any other meat.

Now some of the Christians began to worry over their meat supply. Suppose I buy a steak in the market (one would also) and suppose that steak came from a bull that had been killed as a sacrifice to one of these heathen gods? Won't that make me guilty of idolatry?

So they wrote to the best man they knew, their old evangelist and pastor, the man who had converted them to Christ and organized their church, the Apostle Paul. They asked him about this and other things, and what we call "Corinthians" is his answer.

You might think this best-kept secret problem trivial, but Paul never handled a trivial problem in a trivial way. He approached the problem in this way: Meat is only meat, he said; it certainly wasn't the bull's fault that he was part of a heathen ceremony. As for the butcher, he paid good money for the animal. In a perfectly respectable business transaction, then, where was the sin in eating such meat?

Applications are being handled by members of congress or directly by the "Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion, Fort Meyer, Va."

Persons applying for the mementos must certify that they will not resell them. They must also pay postage or freight. There will be no profit for the government since all money received will go for administration, packing and other costs.

The commission said that such items as pieces of old, lath, stone and metal would sell for 25 cents, paid in advance. A brick, of which there are about 200,000, can be purchased for $1.

The top limit of $100 a purchase will buy enough bricks—for personal use—to build a brick-to face an ordinary fireplace. Each item will be accompanied by a metal tag showing that it is genuine material removed from the White House.

Some items are offered in a small "kit" from which the buyer can if he chooses make assemblies. For example, two pieces of old wood could be made into a gavel. An old square nail and a piece of stone could be mounted on wood or encased in plastic to make a paper weight. Several pieces of wood could be made into a cane.

MUSKOGEE, Mich. — The Muskogee Savings bank came up with a novel advertising scheme. The bank advertised that if it would sell $20,000 worth of dollar bills were exchanged for 98 cents. And a bank official said it was worth the trouble.

Americans have a sense of humor, one bank official said. "I feel sure this new type of bank advertising was enjoyed by everyone in the community."

Joe Stalin and Churchill Turn Out to Be $28 Busto

CHESTER, England—Joe Stalin and Winston Churchill were put on sale for $28 apiece in Chester recently. A furniture warehouseman said the items were sold in a waxworks, which had laid unclaimed in his warehouse for 12 years.

Napoleon and Franklin Roosevelt were priced $141 each.

Gl's Korean Paper

Never Misses Issue Despite Hardships

KOREA—Despite the hardships of war, rain, cold and enemy bullets, the men of the 24th regiment in Korea get their daily newspaper. Col. John T. Corley, Brooklyn, one of the army's most decorated officers, started the paper for his troops when he took over command of the 24th. He called it The Eagle Forward and it has never missed an issue.

The little two-page mimeographed newspaper has become one of the most popular publications in Korea. The first page is devoted to world news of importance, including the latest war developments in Korea. The second page tells the activities of units within the regiment and the achievements of individual soldiers.

One of the most popular features, called "Old Soldier's Aid," was Corley's idea. It consists of a daily bit of advice on how troops can protect themselves from the weather or the enemy. Late the "Old soldier" has been giving sage tips on how to take proper care of the foot.

The paper comes out every day except Sunday, and the two soldiers—Sgt. Milton B. Puffer and Pfc. Cornelius Boykin—who make up the staff, have never missed an issue.

They collect and write news and then crank it out on a mimeograph machine. The paper has a press run of 600 copies. When the division was on the front the paper was taken up on chow trucks. The men read it and passed copies from foxhole to foxhole.

The paper has been put out by candlelight, Korean gaslight, and flashlight.

Glowing Automobiles Urged To Reduce Night Accidents

SAINT LOUIS, Mo., July 25.—Automobiles might be reduced by making vehicles "glow" in the dark, according to a new psychological study.

Dr. Donald Hoppe suggested in a report on experiments conducted at Iowa State College that "reflective sheeting" applied to the rear of a car would make them visible from greater distances. This sheeting, consisting of hundreds of tiny glass beads adhering to a plastic backing, is designed to reflect the glow of headlights. It is now used to some extent by trucks.

"Get me out of here," he shouted.

"I'm cold."

"No wonder you're cold," he said. "You haven't got any dirt on you."

"First pour a pint of whisky over it and bake it for an hour; then pour a pint of rum over it and bake for another hour; then pour a pint of brandy over it and bake till it's done."

"I dunno about the ham," remarked the cook, "but that sure will be wonderful gray."

First Company

A stockbroker was desirous of having proficient clerks in his employ. Before a clerk could enter the office he had to pass a written examination on his knowledge of business. One question was: "Who formed the first company?"

One bright youth, puzzled but not dismayed, wrote: "Knox successfully floated a company while the rest of the world was in liquidation."

Officer: "No doubt about it."

Judge: "Why are you so certain?"

Officer: "Well, I saw him put a penny in the parking meter, then look up at the town clock and shout, 'Hurrah, I've lost fourteen pounds.'"

New Window Resists Atom Bomb Effects

PITTSBURGH—The new Flex-nal Bomb Glass units open automatically in four triangular sections when an explosive force strikes. This release of pressure prevents the window frame from being blown in and greatly reduces the possibilities of flying fragments.

The window consists of three layers laminated into a single unit. The outer layer is a sheet of glass, the middle layer a sheet of polystyrene plastic, and the inner layer a four triangular shaped pieces of glass. The plastic layer extends beyond the glass edges and is bolted to the window frame to serve as hinges, permitting the four segments to open like doors when the outer plate of glass is broken.

After an explosion of sufficient force to open the bomb window, the four segments may be returned to position by retained there by a bolt as shown above, or even a wad of newspaper. The crevices may now be closed with adhesive tape, putty, clay or whatever is handy, and the restored window again affords protection from cold, rain, storm, etc., until such time as the glass may be replaced.
